“ John Phillips was my Father and he's the only Dad I know. I wish we would have had more time to do the things that we said we was going to do before he found out his situation with his health. We lost a lot of time and now there is no more time. My Pops was a real man that stood on protecting his family and wasn't really scared of nothing... Well, I do remember when I was 8 years old and had a friend who was a part of a karate family, his Daddy and Momma were instructors. Me and my friend was having a karate match and he was calling my karate fake because I was learning my moves off of karate movies. So one day I ended up bruising his ribs with a side kick. His father was so mad that he came over to our house with this karate suit on and black belt with no shoes on. Pops answered the door.

And the boy's father was talking and telling him that I hurt his son doing fake karate on him. Pops was saying, " what do you want him to do about it, they're kids and they were playing " The karate Dad told Pops " come outside so I can beat you up! " I was standing right there beside Pops at the door and when I heard that, I grabbed hold of his leg and wrapped myself around his leg and told him " don't go outside, nooo!!! 🤔 he's gonna beat you up Dad!!! All I knew was that he was a real karate man, and I was a Bruce Lee fan, and a regular man can't beat a karate man. And I think my Pops knew it too, and he didn't go outside 😂😂 That was the only time that I seen or heard of Pops allowing disrespect around us as a family. Pops was a very strong and brave family man. I will miss him until I see him in the spiritual world when my time is up, love you Dad 😊

“ So sorry to hear about John's passing. I was fortunate enough to talk on the phone with him a few weeks ago.. We are going to miss John. He was a caring, talented, wise and humble servant of God.

No doubt he's spending his eternal time hunting and fishing with the Lord. We were lucky enough to meet John years ago during his years in Chicago during several intricate stair system installations for which there was no finer gifted tradesman around.
