“ brad and family, I'm so sorry for your loss and wanted to let you know that my thoughts are with you all. One thing that helped me when I lost my parents was something that Erica Jong wrote about. She said something along the lines of congratulations are in order because the person finally got their lessons right and can now rid themselves of their outer shell/ human body and move on in their journey. We all have obstacles (life's lessons) to deal with and we are faced with them over and over until we get them right; and by gum, he must have gotten his right. All my best to all of you Kevin Woodward

“ Dad,

We have just learned that you have left the trappings of your life and a body weakened by age and the passing of time to begin your own personal journey of the spirit. There are simply no appropriate words to express all the emotions that Christine and I are feeling in this moment. May your spiritual journey bring you the enlightenment and the acceptance and ultimately the peace in your heart that may often elude us during our brief stay on this earth. Go quietly with God Dad and know you are in our thoughts in this moment. With love in our hearts we release your spirit from this world....

*Your Daughter and Son,
Christine A. and Bradley C. Jenson*
