“ Glenda as I sit here & think of the days when you & the love of you life were dating, I remember him coming to see you at your home in Cherry Valley. There is a picture in my mind of him sitting in his car (it was white & that is all I remember of it) & you were leaned up against the car you & him both talking with a smile on your faces. I have this pic somewhere that I took on one of the many nights that I spent the night in your home & your Daddy would take be & Debbie to the ballgames. I still miss him calling me Sam. I wish there was something I could do or say to take away your pain, but we both know that is not possible. But Glenda you had a love that a lot of people have never had, & never will have in their lifetime. Just hold on to that & think of all the loving memories that you & Larry shared, & that Haynes/Searcy smile. Girl, my heart just aches for you & all his loved ones. I know Mrs. Virginia feels like she lost a son & Debbie feels like she has lost another brother. The old saying "Time Heals All Wound" who ever thought of that saying must have never lost a loved one. The only thing time does for you is ease the pain as you go on with your life. But wounds like this never heal, they just get easier. I'm not going to say I know how you feel, because myself or even anyone that has been thru losing the love of their life knows either. They just know how they felt, they don't know how Glenda feels. I'll close this by sending you, your Mom & Debbie a big hug & prayers to you & all of Larry's loved ones.
